

Contents

Introduction x

SECTION 1

Getting Started

Introducing Children to the Materials 2

Two Ways That I Begin

Making Learning Visible through Documentation 6

Creating a Culture of Engagement 12

Windy, a Presence in Our School 16

Setting Up for Exploration 20

The Editors Reflect 24

SECTION 2

Cultivating a Naturalist's Sensibilities

The Gift of a Garden 26

"If we save the garden, we save the world."

Naturalist Journal Covers 32

Constructing Letters from Natural Materials

Building an Outdoor Classroom 34

A Scientific Study of Mushrooms 40

Autumn in the Ravine 44

Discovering the Subtle Variations of Leaves

The Editors Reflect 46

SECTION 3

Your Unique Place

Reviving Our Indigenous Traditions 48

Constructing an Appalachian Alphabet 56

An Arts and Literacy Project

A School's Response to Hurricane Irma 62

Sharing a Personal Interest in Fiber Arts 68

An Island Beach Experience 74

Site-Specific Three-Dimensional Design

The Editors Reflect 76

SECTION 4

Outdoor Explorations

Outside and Just Beyond the Classroom Door 78

Developing a Sense of Place

Fostering a Lifelong Love of Rivers 84

Our Third-Grade Connecticut River Valley Curriculum

Five Thousand Two Hundred
Ninety-Two Acorns 88

Designing Efficient Counting Strategies

The Tube Story 92

A Collaborative Effort on the Playground

Winter Transformations 94

The Editors Reflect 96

SECTION 5

Bringing Nature Inside

Close Study of Life Cycles 98

Scientific Observation and Beginning Writing

A Community Comes Together to Make Tomato Sauce 104

Gorgeous Brown! 108

Ever-Changing Big Skies 116

The Editors Reflect 122

Afterword Amelia Gambetti 124

A Report from the Arctic Circle

